Hey.. we need to talk tomorrow.

All of us.

Our kids lives and stability are at risk
here.

Morgan blindsided me with a divorce
the other day.

She said she hasn't been happy. I've been deeply remorseful, and thought everything was fine.

She's being very mean, and I'm not sure what's going on with

Oh me!!!! This hits me blindsided. So terribly so sorry. I'm reading this at 4:50 a.m. and Margie is obviously asleep. I have to be at rehab (heart) from 11:00-12:00...after that we will be free. Whatever time is ok for y'all will be ok for us. Willing to do anything to help.

I was finally going to be ready to pay you all a fair amount of rent as I'm grateful for the help you've provided over the years, and have always anticipated paying it forward.

Morgan told me the things she wanted the most were to move away from the house and be a stay at home mom... she's always said this house is "cursed" and empowered me to work hard to "get us out" although I never really knew how that would happen - because the kids are blessed with their great grandparents next door and their two parents at home.

0.75% of all kids on Earth have it this good

I know I haven't been the most active guy in the family

I know i may be a little weird, and sometimes may do things or not do things that Morgan needs.

But I know for certain that I love those two kids, you and your family, and have always wanted to provide- something that I've struggled with up until recently.

Sorry for the novel. I felt you deserved to know.

I'm not going to involve anyone but family in this.. and you're the first person that knows what's going on outside of Morgan and her friends.. and possibly Caitlin but I'm not sure 100%.

Again, felt you deserved to know because if it doesn't end up being resolved, then I want to ensure we do everything the right way and in a way that has as little effect on the little ones as possible.

But yeah- just a heads up. Morgan may try to come and tell you all what's going on tomorrow.

It's breaking my heart what's going on and how she's saying she's been feeling.

If I would have known earlier - and not felt everything was OK based on everything.. I would've worked on it. I recommended counseling - she shot it down.

Hey.. we need to talk tomorrow.

All of us.

Our kids lives and stability are at risk here.

Morgan blindsided me with a divorce the other day.

She said she hasn't been happy. I've been deeply remorseful, and thought everything was fine.

She's being very mean, and I'm not sure what's going on with her.

I'm really worried about her, and have told her I'd do anything to work on what's needed but she won't have any of it.

She's done and has no plan.. and all I'm doing is sitting here thinking.. ok.. how will you get to work? (I would have to return the lease cause I wouldn't be able to afford two car payments) she'd have to pick up more hours.. losing precious time with the kids.. the kids wouldn't have mommy and daddy in the same house.. something that we both vowed we would always try to work on before calling it quits.

She's completely dead set on this and if this is what she really wants.. at least do.it the right way and let me help her get a car, wait for her to get a full time Job.. and be civil and try to work on ourselves in the process.. and if it works out great but if not at least we can say we tried for our kids sake.

I've said exactly what I've told you to her.. but she just comes back with anger and doesn't believe I'll change the things that are making her feel this way.. which seems to change every day.

I'm willing to fight for us, for the kids. Always. She really had me thinking everything was fine and then boom.. its all at risk right here when we should.be planning our Christmas together.

I just am worried and hope she will slow down a bit and work with me here.

This is all too beautiful to throw away.

I'm willing to do my part.
